

ABSTRACT

A system has a graphical use interface that allows a user to select desired items through either a data-entry-terminal located on-site at a restaurant or store or through a network, for example a network utilizing the Internet. The system may also allow an order to be customized and stored in memory for later recall.